Arnaud D'Argembeau is Full Professor at the University of Liège and Research Director at the F.R.S-FNRS.

His research has focused on understanding the representational systems and neurocognitive mechanisms that support autobiographical memory and future thinking. He examines these questions using a combination of cognitive, behavioral, and neuroimaging methods, mainly in healthy individuals but also in people with psychological disorders. He has published more than 100 scientific articles and is currently an Associate Editor for the journal Memory.
